If anything has been needed to make certain the nomination of Major McKin-ley it has been supplied by Indiana. The Hoosiers cap the climax. To understand the full import of the action of the Indiana Republicans is must be borne in mind that General Harrison is tredougly strong with his people. They have followed with affectionate interest every step in his career as lawsoldier and statesman. They feel that in his prson there came to their state not only the great honor of the presidency but the greater distinction of one of the ablest administrations in the history of the country.

To be told by persons outside of the state that there was a chance for Harrison was to appeal to their state pride and to their strong liking for a strong man. It was in all respects different from the appeal made in any other state for any "favorite son."

To resist this appeal and to pass such a resolution as was passed in the India-na convention was to explain beyond the power of words to express the deep conviction that the Ohio man is at this time the most complete representaive the aspirations of the Republicans of the country. It is not so much a triumph for Ma for McKinley as for the popular senti-ment which is hurrying him on to the white house with an impetus which has no precedent in the history of the coun-

If the steamship companies were let in for these costs in large and frequent batches they would become active champions of a further restriction of immigration. They might even regard such a measure as a bill for their relief. No matter what the steamship companies want, the Congress of the United States should act in the public interest.

We want a healthy country of healthy people, every toller able to earn a fair day's pay for a fair day's work, every man feeling that he is part of a great family which looks to the welfare of every one of its members.

Democratic newspapers are not satisfied with McKinley's position on the money question. It has been noted that they do not agree with him entirely on the tariff question. The fact is that Mc-Kinley is none of their business.

Indiana was the last stagger of the beaten, disappointed and desperate combine. Harrison was to be abused, if he could be, as Blaine was abused, to defeat the choice and the hope of the Republican party.

The wires had been kept hot holding out the tempting bait to the Hoosier Repubsicans. Word had gone to the combine newspapers to "work it up for Harrison." There was nothing in the embine that could win, so the artists of that outfit were ready to rush to a man whom hey did not like a little bit.

day's session of the Methodist conference was presided over by Bishop Foss and the devotional exercises were led by the Rev, W. N. Brodbeck, of Charlestown, Mass.

As soon as some routine business had been disposed of, the order of the day was taken up and Dr. W. J. Kynett, chairman of the committee on eligibility, was recognized and presented the report of the committee which had been referred to them by the conference at yesterday's session. The committee is agreed that the eligibility of women to vote in this convention is a constitutional one and that the general conference has the power to interpret the constitution. The committee recommends the modification of the constitution charging the qualifications of a delegate to the general conference by using the words lay delegate instead of laymen, thereby making the admission of men legal. We report further that this proposed amendment be referred to the annual conferences of the following year and that a two-thirds vote of the reneral conference and a three-fourths vote of the annual conference and a three-fourths vote of the annual conference and in the proposed amendment be respected to the special conference and a three-fourths vote of the annual conference and the proposed amendment be respected to the special conference and the proposed amendment be respected to the contribution of the constitution of the contribution of the conference and a three-fourths vote of the connected the report of the conference adopted the report of the conmittee on eligibility, which refers the woman question back to the churches to be voted on again.
